
The Illusive Vision. In 1851 he was appointed coadjutor for St. Boniface and in 1852, when he was just 35 years old, he became the first bishop of the diocese.

This was to be Taché's lifelong vision for the province, and the realization of this vision would become his life's work. He dreamed of a sister province of Quebec in the West.

Despite his valiant efforts, Taché encountered numerous challenges and obstacles. He was a noble figure who was a man of vision and his work was of a Church in the 1912 and the erection of a second, English-speaking archdiocese in Winnipeg in 1915.
